Abstract Note:	Aaron Williams Papers (1965-1981) consist of scrapbooks, newspaper clippings, scrapbooks, certificates, newspaper clippings, reports, and programs. Many of the clippings and some of the correspondence contain references that give insight into the role of women in North Las Vegas and Clark County, Nevada during the late 1960s and early 1970s. The scrapbooks and newspaper clippings document Williams' career as well as issues he dealt with as councilman and commissioner. These issues include those related to community and infrastructure development, such as airports, sewage treatment plants, senior citizens, health, and urban planning as well as North Las Vegas and Clark county political activities during the late 1960s and early 1970s.

Biographical Note

Aaron Williams was the first African American elected to a local municipal position in the history of Nevada when he became North Las Vegas City Councilman in 1968. Williams served on the council until he was elected to the Clark County Commission in 1971. Williams was educated in Texas and served in the South Pacific with the United States Army during World War II. Upon leaving the service, he worked in the steel industry in Detroit, where he was the assistant superintendent. He resigned from the steel industry to open his own supermarket and, after five years, relocated to Las Vegas. He was initially employed as a porter and then as an orderly at Southern Nevada Memorial Hospital (now University Medical Center). After leaving the hospital he went to work for Reynolds Electrical and Engineering Company (REECO) as a clerk, advancing to senior clerk, clerk supervisor, material control agent, buyer, and senior buyer.

Williams' community interests included National Association for Advancement of Colored People (NAACP), Nevada Lung Association, Optimist Club, National Black Caucus, and the Clark County Democratic Central Committee.
