Abstract:	Citizen Alert is a Nevada-based environmental organization established in 1975 in response to Yucca Mountain being considered as the repository for the nation's nuclear waste. The records in the collection date from 1971-1999, with the bulk of the records from 1988-1996 and focused on issues of concern to Southern Nevada. The collection includes a large subject and administration file containing the organization's mailings, fliers and newsletters regarding environmental issues and events, newsletters of other environmental organizations, press releases and brochures from a number of government agencies, and newspaper clippings on specific environmental topics. The collection also contains a number of environmental reports from federal, state, and local agencies as well as a number of conference and activist packets.

Historical Background

In 1975, Citizen Alert, a Nevada-based group began informing the public about the activities of the federal government in response to Nevada being considered as the storage site for the nation's nuclear waste. Citizen Alert was established by Katherine Hale and Susan Orr, environmental activists who traveled the state to rally support against the federal governments plan to transport nuclear waste to Nevada. Maya Miller a Nevada philanthropist, was also a key figure in the organization and generously funded it. On May 24, 1989, Chris Brown assumed the position of Southern Nevada Coordinator of Citizen Alert. In that position he worked with other environmental groups and Native American communities to oppose Yucca Mountain from becoming the nation's nuclear waste storage site, ensure the protection of water resources, clean up polluted areas of Nellis Air Force Base, promote renewable and alternative energy sources, manage growth and air quality issues in Las Vegas Valley, and prevent the further testing of nuclear weapons.

Scope and Contents Note

The Citizen Alert Records Collection contains materials that date from 1971-1999, but the bulk of the collection dates from 1988-1996. The Nevada-based environmental organization was established in 1975 in response to Nevada being considered as the storage site for the nation's nuclear waste. Since its inception, the organization informed the public about the activities of the federal government in Nevada and advocated against the Yucca Mountain nuclear waste storage site, for the banning of nuclear testing, cleaning up toxic and polluted areas of Nevada, managing urban growth, protecting air and water quality, supporting alternative energy sources, and defending Native American land rights. The collection includes a large subject file containing the organization's mailings, fliers, and newsletters regarding environmental issues and events, newsletters of other environmental organizations, press releases and brochures from a number of government agencies, and newspaper clippings on specific environmental topics. The collection also contains a number of environmental reports from federal, state, and local agencies as well as a number of conference and activist packets.
