Biographical Note

Bob Stupak (1942-2009) was a casino owner who built two major resorts in Las Vegas, Nevada: Bob Stupak's Vegas World and the Stratosphere. Stupak first opened the Million Dollar Historic Gambling Museum & Casino in Las Vegas, Nevada in 1973. When the museum burned down, Stupak decided to build Bob Stupak's Vegas World in 1974, a space-themed casino. Vegas World closed in 1994, and the remaining buildings and property location were used to create his next venture: the Stratosphere. The Stratosphere, built in 1994, is a 1,149 foot building that is the tallest building in the state of Nevada and the tallest freestanding observation tower in the United States. In 1999, he began planning for a new Titanic-themed resort, but the plan was ultimately not approved by the Las Vegas City Council.

Stupak also participated in local politics. He ran two campaigns for mayor of Las Vegas in 1983 and 1987, as well as a campaign for lieutenant governor of Nevada in 2006. Stupak died from leukemia in 2009 at the age of 67.
